------------	--------------	---------------	----------	---	----------	-----------	---	------------	----------	----------------

A short walk on gravel road gets us down into the valley of Sutherlands Creek. We zig zag from bank to bank, feeling like we're a thousand miles from anywhere, no track to be found. Up into & along Deadmans Gully takes us back to the road & down to our starting point at Steiglitz Courthouse. If we could turn back time, we'd join the throngs of miners who made Steiglitz their home for a heady gold rush. Instead we find tranquillity, wildflowers, a burbling creek & beautiful bush.

The walk starts and finishes at the garden of St Erth, an historic 1860s sandstone cottage. I will investigate if we can have lunch at the Garden of St Erth cafe or at a nearby location.

The track then continues on the river flats along the Djerriwarrh Creek. before returning on more undulating trails. Lots of bird life in the Box Ironbark Forest. It covers the entire Djerring Trail with the exception of a boring 4km stretch between Oakleigh and Clayton which we'll travel by train. The Djerring Trail runs alongside the Dandenong train line, much of it underneath the Skyrail that was constructed to remove a number of level crossings. Much of it is beautifully landscaped with a variety of sporting equipment and other facilities included. We'll have lunch at a cafe in Clayton.

A nice trail, circumnavigates the Sugarloaf Reservoir, which is nestled in the Yarra Valley not far from Melbourne. Varied terrain is mainly flat with a few small hills, the highest points providing views of the city and Yarra Valley. Much of the walk is grassland with remnant pockets of dry open forest; walk across the damn wall. Plenty of kangaroos, lizards and maybe an echidna may be seen.

Sun	23-Jul	D	Yarra River Warrandyte to Kangaroo Ground	EM	15	Metro East	30	NE	Peter
This is a winding river walk from Stiggants Reserve through the Warrandyte State Park all the way to Blue Tongue Bend Kangaroo Ground. The main section of the route is along wide formed tracks but the latter part of the route is along narrow tracks which can be uneven underfoot due to rocks and exposed tree roots.
